WHY IT MATTERS

An industry with no market of its own.

Ship managers, agencies, forwarders, ship suppliers, MROs and aviation service firms change hands every year, worldwide. A generation of founders is planning succession, yet most sales still depend on phone calls, brokers and closed circles.

01 General marketplaces

A licensed aviation maintenance company listed between a café and a car wash.

02 Word of mouth

A few calls to people the owner already knows.

03 The right buyer

Often in another country, and never hears about the sale.

Exitport gives this industry a dedicated, confidential market.

HOW IT WORKS

Confidential by design.

In a small industry, news that a company is for sale travels fast. On Exitport, the seller controls who learns what, and when.

- Every seller verified before a listing goes live
- Company registration and authority to sell checked
- Zero commission and no success fee

1. Hide the name
   Company name, city and photos stay private.
2. Buyer signs an NDA
   Exitport's NDA, or the seller's own.
3. Seller approves each buyer
   One by one, before anything opens.
4. The data room opens
   Only for the buyers the seller approved.

BUSINESS MODEL

One flat listing fee. Zero commission.

Brokers in this market typically charge a percentage of the sale price. On Exitport, sellers pay one fixed fee, whatever their company sells for, and buyers pay nothing.

THE FOUNDER

Sinan Polat.

An economist and finance executive whose career has been spent at board and CFO level in international shipping. Having seen from the inside how hard it is for owners in this industry to find the right buyer, he founded Exitport to give maritime, logistics and aviation companies a market of their own.
